Overview

In this comprehensive guide, you'll learn exactly when solar panels are covered, how they impact your premiums, the crucial differences between owned and leased systems, and actionable steps to ensure your solar investment is fully protected. Coverage varies dramatically by installation type: Roof-mounted panels are typically covered under dwelling coverage with higher limits, while ground-mounted systems fall under “other structures” coverage limited to just 10% of your dwelling coverage—potentially leaving expensive systems. When it comes to adding solar panels — otherwise known as photovoltaic (PV) systems — to your roof, most insurance companies see them as part of the structure of your home. That's good news because it means a regular homeowners policy usually has you covered, and you won't need to get special. Homeowners insurance may cover solar panels under your policy's dwelling coverage if your panels are permanently attached to the roof and damaged due to certain covered perils, often excluding wind and hail. Ground-mounted solar panels may be covered under other structures coverage. Paying to replace a damaged system could be a big financial burden for some homeowners.
